The subject matters of claims 1-7 do not appear to involve an inventive step in view of documents 1-3 cited in the ISR and newly cited document 5.

Especially, document 1 describes a common mode signal suppressing circuit for suppressing the common mode signals propagating in the same phase in two conductive wires, in which an opposite-phase signal transmission means connected with the said two conductive wires, for transmitting an opposite signal for suppressing a common mode signal is provided (1) to detect a common mode signal, (2) to feed an opposite-phase signal opposite in phase to the detected common mode signal, and (3) to inject the said opposite-phase signal into the said two conductive wires.

Furthermore, documents 2, 3 and 5 describe that a signal is injected using a coupling among plural windings.

Therefore, a person skilled in the art could have easily conceived of injecting a signal as described in documents 2, 3 and 5 also in the common mode signal suppressing circuit described in document 1.
